WATTS INDUSTRIES APPOINTS NEW SALES MANAGER

Watts Industries has appointed James Clark as sales manager – high pressure products to develop business for its Black Teknigas range of gas control equipment. James has over ten years of experience in sales and product management in the sector with a number of major players.

The appointment means that Black Teknigas has strengthened its added value offering to major corporate gas companies, and represents a fundamental element in the company's plans to build sales via its international network of distributors and resellers.

"The new range of manifolds is just one example of the potential of the Black Teknigas brand in these markets," commented James. "It's a big project for the company and one that I'm excited about. We are investing significantly in this area of business and have strong collateral to back it up."

Black Teknigas is the UK's leading manufacturer of combustion, industrial, medical and laboratory gas control equipment. With the most comprehensive range of gas control solutions available, Black Teknigas serves a wide range of market sectors and customers from large multi-national companies to small end users. Black Teknigas is a division of Watts Industries, one of the world's leading manufacturers of valves and controls.
